

Quilter's Patch Quilt Kits!

This is Edyta Sitar's newest Block of the Month book. And we have it kitted just for you! Spoiler Alert: We have 2 maybe 3 kits available (1 may be spoken for). Kits are $264 or $22/month with credit card. If you are interested please let me know quickly. These kits will not be on the 40% off sale at the end of the month. We also have all the Moda bolts that make up this line. Even though winter has just started, this is the perfect Pick Me Up quilt to brighten the short winter days.

We will also have a Hints & Tips class once a month, in case you need a little help. Look for those classes to start in January.

December 16, 2016

I've decided to create a Christmas wish list that will never be filled. They make movies about stuff like this. It usually ends well with the listed getting, if not exactly what she wants, something a lot better. I don't expect anything from my list except having a little fun.

1. I want a pair of pjs worn by Joan Watson on the tv show Elementary. She wore them once. She came down the stairs at the beginning of the show wearing the coolest black & white horse pjs. Later in the show, Sherlock wakes her up (a different day) and she has on different pjs. I don't know how many sets of pjs this character owns, but you rarely see her in the same outfit twice, pjs or otherwise. I looked them up, foolishly thinking that might be something I could get for myself. Silly me. They are made by Olivia von Halle, and they cost about $500. If I owned $500 pjs, they'd be the only pair in my drawer.

Now I realize that this is tv and she is just a character, but she is one of the best dressed characters on tv, although she clearly doesn't generate the income to support her clothing habit, especially a different pj a night kind of life style. I know, I know. It's tv. And it's marketing. And it doesn't have to be realistic. But it would have been nice to see those pjs one more time in that one episode.

2. Also on my list is an unusual yarn that comes from the muskox. The yarn, called qiviut which is an Eskimo word that means down or underwool, is made from the fine undercoat of the muskox. It's one of the warmest & most luxurious fibers in the world. It can be washed, it's light weight, and it holds its warmth even when wet. But it's not an easy yarn to come by. Domestication of the muskox began in the 1930s, I think. Then a Musk Ox Producers' Cooperative was formed in the late 1960s by Native women on Nunivak Island. The women make knitted items for sale and for a long time, I think, the only way to get any product, let alone the yarn itself, was to buy from the coop. I'd love something from the coop but that stuff is pricier than the horse pjs.

Today, the yarn is available through limited sources-which actually isn't the difficult part of the Christmas wish list item. It's the cost. One ounce (think head band, maybe a hat?) runs about $110. I like scarves. That would take 6-7 ounces, is my thinking. And while I'd love to do a poncho/wrap out of the stuff, I can't see wearing a $1,000 poncho any more than I can envision wearing $500 pjs.

Now Becca heard me talking about my Christmas list and she decided she wanted in on the action. She's convinced me that she and Cassidy need a human sized walk in dog house that is solar heated.

"You mean a greenhouse?" I asked her.

"No, a dog house with solar panels. If you want to grow tomatoes in it, that's up to you."

She's being thoughtful here-if I can walk into it, then I can also store stuff in it, like dog food, extra blankets, wood shavings, buckets, plastic swimming pool, etc. But it could have a human door and a dog door and it would provide some shelter during cold days. I think it's a great idea, because my usual solution in cold weather is to put Cassidy and Becca in the back yard, which is connected to the garage where they can get out of the wind and snow. But Cassidy has figured out how to break the cedar panels that form the backyard fence. And Becca is good at digging out, even in sub zero. Giving them their own house in the front yard is a perfect solution. But Becca's Christmas wish list is even pricier than my list: At first glance the solar heated sheds cost about $2000.

"You can get that air conditioned for the summer, too," Becca said.

"You'll settle for the straw bale fort on the back deck for the time being. You've got igloo dog houses stuffed with shavings and blankets with straw bales surrounding to break the wind."

"You could put in a pool, too. That would be nice."

Clearly Becca was not listening to me. She never does, actually.

"Ask Santa."

"I already sent him a letter. I got a reply back"

"Santa sent you a letter?"

"Yeah, he said I was on the naughty list. Something about cleaning the treats out of the cat box."

"Becca, those are treats."

"Yeah, that's what Santa said too. So it's up to you to build the solar dog house."

"It's on the list."
