

Around the Block
QUILT SHOP

September 30, 2016

For all of the newcomers to my newsletter, I write a short story about, well, nothings. I poke fun at NASA sometimes, I carry on conversations with my mini Australian Shepherd Becca, and I write about things I read in the news or see on tv or around town. For example....

So I saw this old woman crossing Yellowstone (4-lane road) with her walker. And I wondered, Where is she going? She hadn't crossed at any cross walk. She just decided to motor across the street regardless. I figured she knew where she was headed and she didn't want to take any extra steps-like head down to the cross walk about a half a block away.

I drove to the bank, then McD's (both on Yellowstone) and headed back to the shop. And there she was. Determinately walking down Yellowstone, in the bike lane, not on the convenient sidewalk. And I wondered, Where did she escape from? I originally figured she, just like the proverbial chicken, needed to get to the other side of the road, but no. For some reason she had not only crossed in the middle of the street, but then she'd headed down the street. Now, I'm not being unkind, but I don't think she was all there, if you get my drift. And I think she forgot to put her teeth in.

Don't worry. I did my duty and called 911. The call went a little like this:

"There is this old woman using a walker going down..."

"Yellowstone?"

"Yeah! You know about this!?"

So someone else had called it in, too.

I sincerely hope that someone calls 911 for me, when I start wandering down streets with my walker and without my teeth. My niece and one of her friends have this plan that when they get old, they will live together at the same home & sit in the rocking chairs on the porch and talk nonsense. Actually, they'll probably be drinking wine and sniggering at all of the other old people in the home. BTW, I love that line from My Fair Lady, "What are you sniggering at?" Anyway....

It's tough getting older. This week has been a classic example in that. It actually started last week when Jean & I built a block together. It was supposed to be 16 1/2" square. Instead, it was 16 1/4" in some places, 16 1/2" inches in another and 16" across the middle. And we asked ourselves, "How long have we been quilting?" The block is quite unusable and the biggest problem is there are 44 half square triangles blocks that have to be remade.

And then yesterday came along. Jean's been working on a strip quilt and had just finished sewing the top together. But something just wasn't right. After she ripped it out-she just couldn't stand it--, she remeasured & discovered the mistake: She'd cut the sashings 1/2" too short. She's now fixing it.

Not to be outdone, I sewed half square triangles on upside down, not once, not twice but at least 3 times on one of the Block of the Month blocks. Then I sewed a corner in backward and had to rip that out--actually it wasn't until today that I discovered that block still isn't right & will need more ripping. Then I built a block using a new ruler and didn't have enough sense to read the pattern right, so I got the colors in the wrong place. So I wound up sewing a pansy flower block, instead of a star. But I did write back to the company with a couple of suggestions as to how they could make the pattern instructions just a little more clear. I was polite, don't worry.

And then we had a sweet older woman come into the shop who needed help finishing some quilts. Her work was wonderful, but she was now quite lost about what to do next. We did our best, but I'm not sure she will ever finish her tops. And that put a damper on the rest of the afternoon. Jean & I lamented the "getting older" syndrome, while we both were diligently unstitching blocks that we had screwed up.

So as Jean was leaving for home, I told her I was not going to do anything more taxing for the rest of the afternoon except trace a carousel animal (for embroidery) onto fabric, using the light box. What could go wrong?

I finished tracing, lifted the fabric off the light box & discovered I had traced the pattern on the wrong side of the fabric.

WHAT'S NEW!!

From Hoffman:

Some notions came in: Towels (feed sack style), sew in magnets (for the Wrapsody purse), 45 degree replacement blades, chalk pencils.

From Troy: We got 26? (give or take) falling leaves flannels--all the same print, all different colors from red through indigo, with black/gray and gray. Very pretty. Here is a sampling:

From Andover:

There are also present in the Advent Christmas line that I couldn't get to load.

This class is great for beginners and all levels of appliquers. Don't let hand applique frustrate you. It's really easy and relaxing!
